Government refusal to grant referendum on Europe exposes dishonesty of a bankrupt system

WE SAY: KEEP EIRE OUT OF ULSTER!

THE PICTURE on the right shows Ulster Unionist MPs Ken Maginnis and James Molyneux arriving at Dublin Castle for the latest round of talks on the future of Northern Ireland. We believe that these MPs are making a big mistake by attending such talks.

It has been a mistake on the part of Unionists from the outset to attend any discussions about Northern Ireland which include representatives of the Irish Republic, for the plain fact is that the Irish Republic has no business whatever in Northern Ireland.

It is an even bigger mistake for Ulster Unionists to attend such discussions when they take place on the territory of the Republic.

It is disgraceful that the British Government has ever consented to the inclusion of the Irish Republic in any such talks, let alone that the talks should take place in a place like Dublin.

Unionist MPs should know better than to be a party to such an insult to their loyal constituents.

No to Maastricht!

NO 76% of Brits want to stay BRITISH
By GRAHAM JONES and NICKY WILKINSON
BRITAIN has given a resounding NO to more ties with Europe.
An exclusive Daily Star poll reveals today that 76 per cent of those people asked if they would like to remain free to live and work in Britain as they are now, have said yes.
Only 24 per cent of those asked if they would like to join the European Union, have said yes.
The poll was carried out by the Daily Star's own research department, and is based on a survey of 1,000 people.
The results show that the British people are overwhelmingly in favour of remaining free to live and work in Britain as they are now, and are against joining the European Union.

TIME FOR BRITAIN TO BREAK FREE

WITH BRITAIN having quit the ERM, and with the Maastricht Treaty looking more and more of a non-starter, it is now high time for Britons to concentrate their minds seriously on where they and their country are currently going.

The recent collapse of the Pound is in fact deeply rooted in the misgovernment of Britain that has continued throughout the post-1945 period. It is the outcome of the whole policy pursued by our politicians for half a century.

Just look at how the politicians have deliberately stripped this country of one national asset after another. After 1945 they handed away her Empire. Next, they stripped her of her hi-tech capacity. This has continued from the 1950s right up to the present. It will be remembered how MacMillan's Tory Government of the 1950s killed off the Blue Steel and Blue Streak rocket projects, depriving us of any genuinely independent nuclear defence capability; how Wilson's Labour Government murdered the TSR2 swing-wing fighter, the most advanced plane in the world of its kind, in the 1960s; and how Heath's Tories wiped out the Rolls Royce RB211 aero-engine project, so that Britain, instead of being the world's leader in aero-space, became just a straggler behind the Americans.

Finally, during the past 13 years our politicians have stripped this country of most of what is left of its remaining industrial assets. The great firms making up its manufacturing base, built up over generations by the effort and enterprise of her people, have been deliberately allowed to be run into the ground by Japanese and other foreign competition, or sold off for a fast buck to the first foreigner with a pile of money to spend in the City. This was the policy of the Tory Government of Margaret Thatcher in the 1980s, to which both Premier Major and Chancellor Lament belonged.

When recession came along to put an end to the short-lived Thatcherite binge of speculation in the City, which had been deliberately built on Britain's industrial ruin of the early 1980s, we finally stood as an industrial hollow shell, no longer producing anything solid in the way of goods for sale. Not surprisingly, no longer having much left to back it up, the true value of the Pound had collapsed.

To save the Government, Major dragged Britain into the ERM, under which he hoped he would be able to induce the Germans to subsidise our sagging currency.

For their part, the Germans have seen no reason why they should do so — and they are right. The strength of the Mark reflects the real economic strength that they have built up for their country through hard productive effort, just as the contrasting weakness of the Pound is a measure of Britain's real lack of economic substance.

It is time for Britain to stop seeking economic salvation through international arrangements, as her politicians have been doing for so long to compensate for their own run-down of her real sources of economic strength. We have practised fawning subservience to America. We have tried immersing ourselves in Europe. None of this has done us any good. At the end of the day, trying to leech on foreigners has left us humiliated, broken and despised.

It is time for Britain to break free, to snap out of her lethargy and rebuild her strength by her own labours in proud and honourable independence.

'DEMOCRACY': A TIME FOR STOCKTAKING

BRITAIN, so they are never tired of telling us, fought two world wars during this century in defence of 'democracy'. As we are now in the final decade of the century, it is perhaps a good time for a stocktaking of what 'democracy' — the establishment's conception of 'democracy' at least — has achieved for us.

A vast empire has been lost. The manufacturing resources of the country that led the Industrial Revolution have been gutted.

to steer the nation successfully through the modern world to prosperity, strength and order.

We have advocated an alternative system which will make possible the dynamism of leadership needed — putting an end to weakness in government, to the eternal bickering of political parties and to the resulting national division; a system which will unite government and people in a mighty movement of national endeavour inspired by a new code of patriotism, citizenship and government serve as instruments of the people's will is revealed as a sick joke. Laws legalising homosexual acts and abortion and ending capital punishment have been passed by parliament against the known wishes of the majority of the British public. Again and again, both parliament and government have acted against the wishes of the majority on immigration and Europe, refusing to place any effective barriers vision. We would also ensure that all present curbs on freedom of press and publishing were removed by legislating and acting against the pressures which limit the distribution and sales of newspapers, magazines, books and other printed material of which some interests disapprove.

We, unlike those opposed to us, are not afraid of free and open debate. We have enough confidence in the rightness of our own viewpoint to believe that we can win

Our hallowed political system, says JOHN TYNDALL, has neither preserved our freedoms nor enabled the people's will to prevail and public service; a system which will bring order and discipline to national life where previously anarchy and chaos have ruled.

THE SYSTEM'S LIES AND EXCUSES

To this, the reaction of our opponents has been predictable: they have accused us of seeking to stamp out the alleged 'freedoms' that are part of their system of 'democracy', to impose a 'tyranny' upon the people under which government will act arbitrarily and without consideration for the people's will — by contrast with their own system under which, supposedly, government acts on behalf of the people, and parliament is the people's loyal and faithful representative.

But our experience is that these claims are totally bogus. What of the 'freedoms' of which the apologists for the system speak? To any movement posing a truly fundamental and radical challenge to this system and to prevailing policies, they scarcely exist. Our party has met with what is virtually a blanket ban on the hire of public meeting halls up and down the country by Tory and Labour local authorities alike. Our right of assembly in outdoor public places has been rendered almost meaningless by the action of police, under the direction of their political masters, in confining us to locations where we have little or no access to the ordinary British people to whom we wish to speak. Our publications are effectively excluded from the shelves of newsagents and bookshops by means of hidden pressures against the owners from which government conveniently distances itself by the claim of non-involvement but which it does nothing to stop. Meanwhile, we are almost totally barred from TV and radio while political groups of far smaller size and importance are given ample access in the name of rights for 'minority opinions'.

And in extreme cases we have seen our spokesmen sent to jail for speaking unfavourably of the ethnic minority contributions to British culture and civilisation. At the same time, the protest-against the immigrant influx and immersing Britain ever more deeply into European Union by such legislation as the Single European Act.

THE BULLDOZING OF MAASTRICHT

Now, as the next stage in sinking British nationhood in European Union, the Major Government has been contriving to obtain ratification of the Maastricht Treaty. Major knows that the Treaty is deeply unpopular with the British public, but he has flatly refused to allow a national referendum on the matter — despite the fact that there has recently been a referendum in France which showed support for the Treaty by a tiny minority.

Last month two opinion polls conducted by daily newspapers revealed what we have long claimed to be the truth: that the British public is strongly against Maastricht and would almost certainly vote against it were a referendum allowed here. Little wonder then that the politicians, headed by the Prime Minister himself, are desperately anxious to deny the people the right to vote on this crucial issue. As on so many vital questions that have arisen previously, parliament is determined to act in contempt for the opinions of the people it claims to represent.

It all reveals once again what we have said repeatedly before: their much vaunted 'democracy' is just a fraud, a racket maintained to delude the people that they have real freedoms and that government acts in their name.

OUR PLEDGE ON FREEDOM

Whatever our opponents may say to the contrary, the BNP is not against the principle of democracy: the principle that there should be complete freedom — real freedom, not just the bogus freedom that is supposed to exist at present — for the public expression of every viewpoint. We simply believe that there is a better mechanism for ensuring the prevalence of such a freedom than the one existing at present.

We would in fact ensure the any argument, without the need to gag dissident opinions.

Nor are we against the principle that government should act and legislate on the really great issues in accordance with the will of the governed. Again, we simply believe that a different method is needed for this will to be expressed and acted upon.

Unlike the doctrinaire 'democrat', we do not believe that the average man in the street is competent to make a judgement on all of the vast complex of issues that come before the nation's leaders and legislators in the routine round of national administration. Nor do we believe that the popular will is in the least bit served by parading a gaggle of political parties before the voter at election time, when in all essentials those parties serve the same masters and offer the people no real choice.

But we do believe that on real 'gut' issues, such as Immigration and Europe, where basic questions of national survival are at stake, it is the duty of government to consult the people, by whatever mechanism is deemed appropriate, and, at the end of the day, to obey the people. Referenda are one method of doing this; there are others. The principle is that on those matters that determine the whole question of what kind of nation Britain is to be for hundreds of years to come — indeed of whether we have any nation left to us at all in the hundreds of years to come — it will be the will of the people as a whole that will carry the day.

Always provided, of course, that the debate preceding the expression of the people's will is a proper one, and not a controlled one in which the vast resources of money, media and state are all deployed on one side.

That is real democracy — not the pretence of 'democracy' that presently masquerades under that name.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

The adoption of democracy as a form of government by all European nations is fatal to good government, to liberty, to law and order, to respect for authority and to religion, and must eventually produce a state of chaos from which a new world tyranny will arise.

The Duke of Northumberland, 1931

BY THE TIME this issue reaches our readers, John Major's latest Tory Government will have been in office for six months — having won an election for no better reason than that the voters, rightly or wrongly, believed that the Labour alternative would be even worse. When Major & Co. were re-elected we said: "The reality is that the granting of the Tories of another five years of office solves nothing. Their record is lamentable in nearly every branch of national affairs and there is no sign whatever of a change of course." We were right. Britain had elected a weak and incompetent government headed by a weak and incompetent Prime Minister. In fact, the shambles to which the Major gang has reduced the nation in a mere six months exceeds, possibly, even our own gloomy view of Britain's prospects when the words quoted were written.

Major has lamentably misjudged the needs of the national economy, committing us to high interest rates, and therefore to monetary starvation, in order to maintain the Pound at a false level in the world's money markets and justify his own misbegotten policy of taking us into the ERM. The result? Yet higher unemployment, more industries going to ruin, more homes being repossessed — and after all this the Pound has still collapsed and we have been forced out of the ERM anyway.

On the European front, the Maastricht Treaty, the terms of which

MAJOR
Weak and incompetent, he has made Britain despised throughout Europe

Six disastrous months BRITAIN PAYS A HEAVY PRICE FOR ELECTING JOHN MAJOR AND THE TORIES

Major and his chums heralded as a magnificent achievement a few months ago, has become even more unpopular and discredited after the Danish referendum rejected it and the French one approved it by a majority that is derisory by any standards. Now many of Major's own MPs who a short time ago were supporting the Maastricht deal are, like rats jumping off a sinking ship, opposing it as they realise how deeply repugnant it is both to great numbers of people in their own party and to the voters who elected them. Major is faced with (no pun intended) a major rebellion in both parliament and the country.

Meanwhile, this appalling catalogue of errors and cock-ups has been compounded by the fiasco of the Mellor affair. Major's 'Minister of Fun', after first embroiling himself in public scandal by jumping into bed with an actress, brought even further

MELLOR
His antics made a laughing stock of the Government but Major hadn't the guts to sack him disgrace on the Government by accepting a holiday with all expenses paid which any moderately sensible politician would have realised would publicly compromise him, and then capping it all by failing to list the holiday in his MP's declaration of interests. Yet throughout this scandal Major totally failed in his duty to call for the resignation of his humiliated colleague or sack him if that was not forthcoming. In this failure the Prime Minister displayed a weakness and irresponsibility that was almost equal to his colleague's — while in terms of national damage it had even worse consequences, given the Prime Minister's seniority of office.

Major now stands exposed as one of the most disastrous premiers in a long succession of disastrous ones with which Britain has been afflicted during the 20th century. His policies are discredited right across the board, and he personally is discredited for his role in implementing them. Worst of all, Britain itself is discredited, not to say despised, throughout Europe and the wide world beyond for the shipwreck of a nation it has now become and for having the childish naivety to choose such a bumbling no-hoper to lead it.

It never gives us pleasure to say: "We told you so." But this is the only possible comment we have for the people who voted Tory last April.

MORE VICTIMS OF FREE TRADE DOGMA

British Aerospace and Rolls Royce could be thriving today if we had a 'Buy British' policy

TWO major British manufacturing companies took further steps towards insolvency last month with large layoffs of workers resulting from the recession. Yet both companies could be booming if British Governments over the past two decades had practised a 'Buy British' policy, insulating the home market against unnecessary imports.

British Aerospace closed down its factory at Hatfield, in Hertfordshire, which had had a long and proud tradition of plane-making since it began operations as the de Havilland plant in 1934. Its products include: the Mosquito fighter-bomber, which distinguished itself in World War II; the Comet, the world's first commercial jet airliner; the Trident, which succeeded the Comet; not least, the world-famous Tiger Moth.

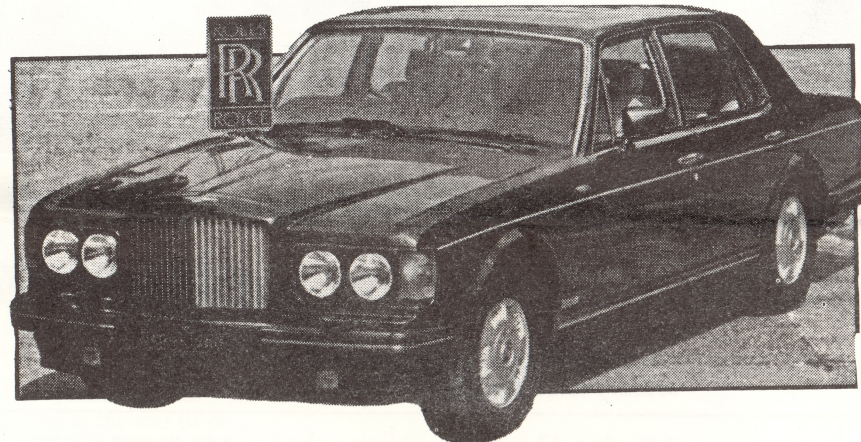

Not only does the closure of BAE's Hatfield works drive yet another nail into the coffin of the British aircraft-manufacturing industry, it is likely, in the opinion of many local people, virtually to kill the town of Hatfield as well.

British Aerospace is not one of British industry's 'lame ducks'; it has a record for efficiency few companies in the world could better. It is simply the victim of a policy of turning to America for the bulk of Britain's civil aircraft which has been in operation increasingly since the 1960s.

In the decade previous to this, Britain was, in the words of Roy Sherwood in his illuminating book Superpower Britain, "literally years ahead in airline development." Bit by bit, and through a series of disastrous decisions made mainly by government, this lead was then surrendered to the Americans. It is a matter of conjecture whether these decisions were the consequence of pure muddle or whether they stemmed from deliberate policy. However, a number of cancellations of vital aircraft projects, such as the VC7 intercontinental jet airliner — which marked the first step in our abdication from large-scale civil aircraft production, and the TSR2 military aircraft, have never been explained in terms of any financial logic and inevitably leave in the mouth the taste of treason in high places. This treason of course has not lacked rationalisation in terms of fashionably high-sounding post-war ideological concepts, such as 'interdependence', 'globalisation', 'special relationship', and so on. Mr. Sherwood says of the capitulation by British politicians to American interests:-

"It was a process facilitated by the continuing close links established between Britain and America during World War II through which British officials were subjected to prolonged exposure to American salesmanship. This was compounded by the notion that to duplicate the American effort was both unnecessary and futile, particularly in the face of United States omnipotence with which British officials and politicians allowed themselves to be unduly overawed..."

This unbroken succession of disastrous policies could be remedied today were Britain to have a government with the determination to regain the nation's former position of pre-eminence in aeronautical technology, and in pursuit of that to rebuild British aircraft manufacturing behind protective walls. While our only political alternatives are Tory and Labour, however, this is most certainly not going to happen; both are ideologically and fixedly wedded to internationalism, and are unable to see the way out of any problem by means of British effort, skill and self-reliance.

ROLLS SLASHES WORKFORCE

The same commitment to internationalism is the principal cause of the decline of another great British institution: Rolls Royce, who last month announced the laying off of 950 of its 3,200 highly-skilled staff at its single factory in Crewe, Cheshire. Rolls' sales have slumped by 65 per cent in the past 18 months, and at that rate the firm is clearly headed for extinction — or, almost equally as bad, foreign takeover. No doubt government would welcome the latter, as every Tory policy since 1979 has indicated the desire to see British industry an appendage of foreign-owned multinationals.

But none of this need have been. The British market for luxury cars has been deeply penetrated by foreign models such as German Mercedes and BMW's and Japanese Toyotas. These cars, admittedly, cater for income groups somewhat below those traditionally supplied by Rolls and Bentley models; but that simply indicates better market awareness and planning. Rolls Royce could have adjusted production priorities so as to supply cars to this range of customer, but for that to work effectively at this stage of things it would require the closure of the home market to the imported vehicles in question. No Tory or Labour government would contemplate such a step. Again, the hypnosis of internationalism overrules all thinking and policy.

Great British firms like Rolls Royce, British Aerospace and its predecessors, and countless others either ruined or facing imminent ruin, will only be revived by a nationalist economic policy based first of all on faith in British manufacturing capability and secondly on a determination to preserve the British market for British products — a policy similar to that which has lain at the centre of Japan's rise to her current manufacturing pre-eminence. In the final analysis, of course, the will to put such a policy into practice must be political, and that means first of all revolutionary political change.

Perhaps the last word should be left to Mr. Sherwood, who says of the decline of Britain's aircraft industry:-

"It is a tale of bright vision and high endeavour eclipsed by incompetence, ignorance and blind stupidity. It is also the story of a crime, a crime perpetrated by Britain's decision-makers against the people of Britain."

YOUR LETTERS

Sir, — Despite John Major's assurances to the contrary, the Maastricht Treaty sets Britain on the road to a federal Europe. If the Treaty is ratified this year, the EC will become the European Union (EU), a new super-state to which we will owe the duties of citizens. The blueprint for our future includes provisions for a European police force (Europol), a European army, and identity cards for the people.

We must act now against the Maastricht cul-de-sac. We must decide whom political unification is for: us the people, or them the politicians. The idea of subsidiarity is nonsense. While it is true that the Treaty does mention subsidiarity, it proposes a massive new transfer of additional government power from member states to the EC. The Maastricht Treaty into which Mr. Major has sold Britain is a rich and prime example of gobbledygook embracing simultaneously two opposed concepts of subsidiarity.

No British Government which values independent self-government and the future of the natives of Great Britain could support the implications of the Maastricht Treaty.

Sir, — With reference to the article by Mr. Tyndall in the June issue in which the writer says that Britain should return to being an oceanic power rather than a European one, one good side effect of this would be a return to work for thousands of people once employed in the shipbuilding industry — for once such a policy were put into effect Britain would have much greater need for ships than at present.

Now in Palestine between the end of 1945 and the end of 1947 170 British personnel were murdered and 418 wounded by Jewish terrorists. Some of these victims were innocent, defenceless women! But the Jewish terrorists in question remain largely undetected and unpunished.

So when will our Government be making demands to the Government of Israel that these criminals be brought to justice?

In contrast, the monarchy, through centuries of interbreeding, has produced the appalling specimens we see today, unfit to rule, devoted to Black Commonwealth states and completely opposed to White Nationalism, as for example in South Africa.

Immigrant flood brings chaos to Germany as the people rebel against having aliens forced upon them. Report by JOHN MORSE.

TROUBLE flared across Germany in August and September as the people's patience with seemingly endless waves of immigrants thrust upon them finally snapped. Demonstrations against hostels specially set up, at great public expense, to accommodate aliens claiming 'refugee' status ended in some of the hostels being burnt down by protesters.

In the formerly communist-ruled eastern states of Germany the protests developed almost to the scale of a popular uprising as masses of young people, many backed by their parents and other elders, took to the streets.

In the city of Rostock, where the disturbances began, residents of the sprawling Lichtenhagen estate cheered on demonstrating youths, joining in their chants of 'Germany for the Germans!'

The mood spread rapidly to other parts of the country. Up to 25 other towns and cities experienced similar popular protests.

Even the Interior Minister for Mecklenburg, the state in which Rostock lies, Lothar Kupfer, had to acknowledge the force of popular opinion on the immigration issue. Despite media claims that 'neo-nazis' were stirring up the troubles, Kupfer was forced to declare "a certain understanding" for the anger of Rostock townsfolk.

At a public meeting to discuss the problem in the town of Cottbus, addressed by the Prime Minister of the state of Brandenburg, one young nationalist, Frank Hübner of the Deutsche Alternative, practically managed to take the proceedings over. Hübner, who warned that "racial mixing will be the death of the German people," earned loud applause from the audience after giving voice to townspeople's feelings against the noise, dirt and petty crime brought to Cottbus by the waves of Rumanian Gypsies and other immigrants who have been allowed to pour in. The local police chief shook him by the hand when he offered to help restore calm.

Meanwhile, an imported thousand-strong mob of left-wing 'anti-nazis' pitched up in Rostock to demonstrate on behalf of the immigrants, staging violent attacks on largely poor and unemployed local residents. Most of these intruders were well-heeled student degenerates from comfortable West German middle class backgrounds who had known little hardship ever in their lives.

'FILTH'

One riot policeman called in to control the red rabble gave vent to his feelings in no uncertain terms. "These are filth," he said. "They have no local support. They are wealthy pigs who come here in buses and big cars from the West." He said that it was not they but the nationalists who were speaking for the people of Rostock.

Many of the reds are in fact the sons and daughters of the politicians, civil servants, judges, journalists, clergymen and other power-wielders who run Germany's self-styled 'democratic' régime or act as its spokesmen. This is not so different from how things are in Britain, where the extreme left is also the street-level representative of the interests of our own 'democratic' ruling establishment.

Germany's present rulers, like Britain's, have in fact been treating the people with high-handed and arrogant contempt over the whole life-and-death issue of immigration for a long time. By the end of this year, no less than 500,000 aliens will have been allowed order to rid themselves of one foreign occupation and tyranny. They did not do this in order to have their country taken from them by a second wave of invaders.

Yet the 'democratic' régime in Bonn expects them to submit to just that. As an insult added to the injury of recession and unemployment they have been made to endure since re-unification, which left ordinary workers living in the run-down tenements built by the communists, the Bonn Government has extended the asylum laws to the new federal states of the East, in in the space of the last 12 months alone. A million have already arrived in the past three years.

RENTAMOB TURNS OUT

As in Britain, where similar floods are under way, the electorate has never been consulted. Politicians and the media never seriously trouble themselves to explain or enlighten the populace as to what is going on and why. Instead, the latter are expected just to submit to the invasion without question.

REFUGEE CLAIM BOGUS

The thin justification for the invasion sometimes given is that the waves of immigrants now coming in are 'political refugees' fleeing persecution in their lands of origin and that they must be given accommodation on 'humanitarian' grounds. But among those turning up in Germany it is estimated that only some 7 per cent even vaguely qualify under these terms. Even so, the German Government refuses to modify the country's ultra-liberal asylum laws, which allow in any alien who seeks entry just on his own say-so as to who and what he is — with instant access to social security, housing and other benefits at the German taxpayers' expense. The latter of course is the real reason why most come.

Apart from all else, whether the refugees are genuine or not, most ordinary Germans, like most ordinary Britons, see no reason why it should be up to them to shoulder the burdens of the whole world.

BIGGEST RESISTANCE IN EAST

The most two-fisted response to the immigrant flood in Germany has come from the eastern part of the country, where not so long ago the people faced Soviet tanks and the riot squads of the old communist Stasi secret police in obliging them too to accept quotas of Afro-Asians, Bulgarian Turks, Rumanian Gypsies and now Bosnian and prosperous West tolerance is wearing thin at what is seen as an invasion of freeloaders which is not

VOICE OF RISING GERMAN NATIONALISM

Frank Hübner, one of the younger patriotic leaders in Germany, addresses an audience in Cottbus on the perils of immigration

Moslems. The comfortable hostels put up for the newcomers have been seen as visible symbols of a new tyranny replacing the old.

But the mood of revolt is not limited to the East. In the hitherto comfortable only endless but ever growing in scope and scale.

To add to the Turkish 'guest-workers' of the 1960s and 1970s, there have been the Tamils and African 'refugees' of the 1980s, and now the human flotsam and jetsam of Yugoslavia's civil wars — all alien to the Germans and their traditional way of life. Our West German correspondent reports that once neat and orderly German towns are now infested with foreigners, crowding the streets and public squares, begging and causing trouble.

The overwhelming majority of Germans are hostile to their presence, he says, but the Government is still proclaiming that many more must come. He comments that this is an act of treason that the general public throughout the country are now starting to recognise as such.

In a reaction which may soon find its counterpart in Britain as well, the vote for nationalist parties has been steadily growing in the Federal Republic's western states. This may even be the issue that in the long term will bring the Republic's whole present régime to an end, paving the way for a resurgent Germany.

What about the workers?

RED GARBAGE SHOW TRUE COLOURS AS ESTABLISHMENT HIRELINGS

THEY call themselves the 'Socialist Workers' Party'. But in fact a close-up of them shows hardly a worker among them.

Most of them would seem to be students of decidedly middle class background and 'politically correct' liberal bent — albeit gone slightly over the top.

The word 'bent' is used advisedly. One of the most pronounced features of the Socialist 'Workers' Party is the large number of homosexuals in its ranks. Their profile of 'Gay Rights' demos tends to be a very high one.

One recent gathering of perverts in Central London staged in the name of the queer group 'Outrage' prominently featured a limp-wristed SWP appeal to "Smash the BNP Nazis." To be hated by elements like this, the BNP must surely be doing something right!

PREMIER COURTING SUPPORT

The SWP and the 'Outrage' group which backs it up (in some cases perhaps literally!) call themselves 'revolutionaries'. But just before the last election no less a personage than our Prime Minister was grovelling for homo grace and favour — not least because of his awareness of 'Gay Power' in the mass media.

Bending over backwards — as you might say — he conspicuously received 'Gay Rights' activist, actor Ian McKellen, at No. 10 Downing Street amid a glare of TV cameras and pressmen. Shortly afterwards, and just possibly as part of the pay-off made by the Tories to the homos in exchange for their support, Government officials, challenged over the pushing of queer leaflets into the hands of young children outside their schools, announced that they could do nothing about this because it was all part of the 'rights' which belonged to the homos.

This was in spite of the fact that to this very day queer sex is still illegal for under-18s.

Here is just one area where, far from being 'revolutionaries', the Socialist 'Workers' Party and its supporters show themselves to be absolutely foursquare with the establishment — and not least with the Tory Party they profess to be fighting.

NO WONDER aliens are pouring into Britain. It's obviously gone out on the bush telegraph: If you're from the Third World, the great British nanny is everybody's patsy.

Not so long ago we reported in British Nationalist how Camden Council in North London was throwing open unoccupied luxury pads to Somalis and other Africans pitching up at Heathrow with plaintive stories of 'persecution' back where they came from.

Now it's revealed that some of the smartest addresses in Westminster are being instantly let to waves of self-styled 'refugees' from the Lebanon and the Sudan. Typical cases are those of Mounir Nhaily and Bassam Baghdadi, who made their way from Beirut to Britain 21 months ago. The two have a de-luxe flat in Queensway, Bayswater, just next to Hyde Park.

The rent is £309 a week — all paid by Westminster Council — in other words, by the local British community charge-payers. To add insult to injury, Nhaily and Baghdadi are also allowed to milk the British taxpayer for weekly dole money.

Nhaily turned up in this country with a hard luck story about fleeing Lebanon's civil war. This in fact ended a year ago, but he has not been sent back. Nor apparently does he expect to be.

He is living the life of Reilly — he can even afford a telephone. "I don't want to go home," he says. "I prefer living in London."

Just round the corner in Sussex Gardens live fellow Lebanese Marwan Andraos and Maurice Azar, who are soaking the community charge-payer for £80 a week in rent. And in fashionable Inverness Terrace two Sudanese, Ibrahim Amir and Rashid Abdalla, have a similar luxury home funded to the same amount.

These cases are just the tip of the iceberg, according to inside sources quoted in The Sun newspaper.

Meanwhile, Westminster Council has no less than 6,964 people on its waiting list for council housing, most of them native British.

COUNCIL POWERLESS

Deputy Council Leader Councillor Simon Milton says that under the law as it stands the local authority has no option but to house these newcomers. Tories blame the 1977 Housing and Homeless Persons Act, passed by the last Labour Government, for this state of affairs. Any immigrant gatecrashing Britain as a 'refugee' is allowed in, supposedly pending the consideration of his case by the Home Office. Whilst here, the 'refugee' has to be treated as if he were an unintentionally homeless Briton, and is thus put to the top of the housing list. If he has no connections in Britain he can pick and choose which borough's charity to put himself upon.

The word has obviously gone out in both Sudan and Lebanon. Last year 1,150 migrants came from the former and 755 from the latter. Since there are troubles of one sort or another not only in these countries but throughout the 'Third World' there are literally billions of aliens who can turn up on Britain's doorstep demanding asylum. And they will be able to rely on being admitted — just like that!

Tory MP Terry Dicks said: "The act was conceived by fools and implemented by idiots for the benefit of scroungers."

But it was the Tory Government of Margaret Thatcher, which he supported, that made it dead easy for aliens to gain entry into Britain. It was under Part 3 of the Housing Act of 1985 that these 'refugees' were allowed to claim 'homeless' status. Nobody among the Tories, from John Major downwards, is now moving to repeal the act, any more than they are moving to kick out phony asylum seekers like Mounir Nhaily.

Immigration authorities are now so overwhelmed with applications from Third World gatecrashers to Britain that, as they admit, it is now quite impossible to deal with each individual case as the law theoretically requires. As things stand, most of the gatecrashers just stay on.

The truth is that the Government and Britain's rulers in general want these aliens here. Were it otherwise, they would set the formidable apparatus of the modern state to work with a will to remove them. Instead, they do nothing at all in this direction. On the contrary, public policies are actively pursued which can only have the effect of drawing yet more vast numbers of immigrants towards Britain.

BANGLADESHI GETS FAVOURABLE TREATMENT

Liberal Democrat-controlled Tower Hamlets Council in East London, with a long list of young Britons waiting for flats, recently gave Bangladeshi immigrant Mohammed Ali two homes to accommodate his two wives and 16 children. Not content with this, Ali, who is jobless because, as he says, he "hasn't the time to work," wants a third! It is estimated that he receives £490 a week in benefit.

The same council has meanwhile taken over brand new housing in the Isle of Dogs, which developers were unable to sell privately because of the recession, and turned it over to masses of Third World immigrants.

This is all at a time when British householders thrown out of their homes because they have lost their jobs and can't pay their mortgages are getting barely a scrap of comfort from the Government or anyone else.

On the contrary, who is now being put first by Britain's masters is clearly shown by a new housing trust project in South London.

1,500 new houses are to be built on 40 sites across the area with the help of a £60 million taxpayers' subsidy. But none of these will be made available to struggling white families.

Three housing associations, Hexagon, Threshold and Wandle, will run the homes up primarily for the benefit of "young Afro-Caribbeans, Asians and Vietnamese refugees." The only other groups apart from ethnic minorities to be allowed in will be 'homeless women' and HIV sufferers (in other words, queers). The associations will take referrals only from agencies representing these elements.

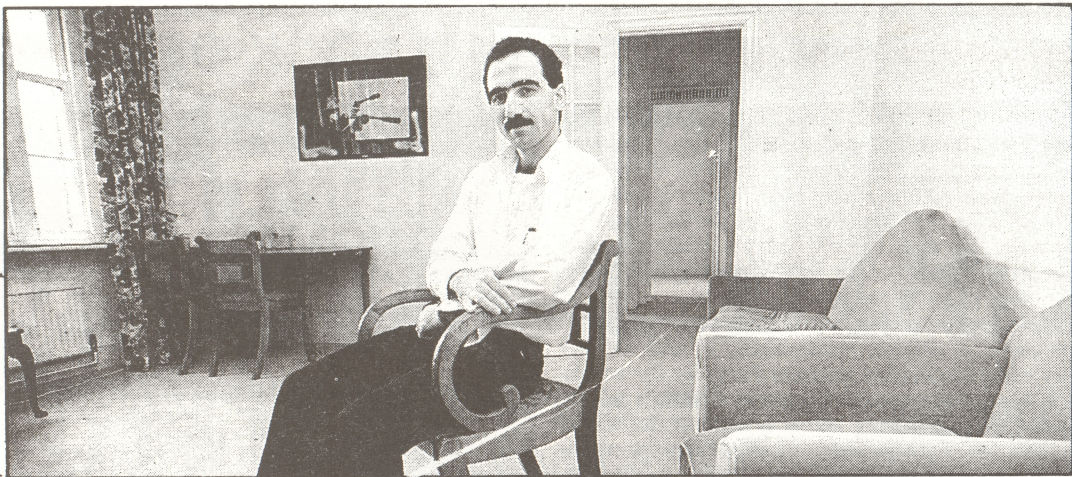

Trust Deputy Chairman, establishment bigwig Sir Norman Wakefield, said: "The associations have a commitment to new black and ethnic minority groups. Without that we would not feel able to give our full-blooded support."

Sir Norman does not seem to think that he should feel any obligation towards ordinary British people.

Meanwhile, he said he hoped the scheme would be widely copied. Homeless Britons in other parts of the country, be warned!

Some might think that this country's rulers could hardly have spelt out with more brutal clarity that their true policy is to bulldoze the native British people out of existence with vast floods of aliens.

WHITES UNDER ATTACK...

but the truth is censored and twisted

WHENEVER an 'ethnic minority' member comes to grief at the hands of a White, the whole mass media are set in motion to whip up sympathy for him. Thus when Afghan immigrant Ruhullah Aramesh was killed in Croydon by what seems to have been a gang of Whites he is instantly declared a victim of 'racism' and is given headline news.

But when young British White Paul Carter was brutally murdered by a mainly Asian gang in Walsall this did not even rate a mention in the national news. Neither press nor police in the West Midlands were at all willing to acknowledge that the motive of Paul's killers was racial. Instead they said simply that the latter had been trying to steal his jacket.

In view of the fact that Paul Carter was deliberately stabbed over and over again in such a way as to tear the jacket to shreds, local people have been sceptical, to say the least, of the claims that the motive was mere robbery.

A tremendous hue and cry went up for the capture of Aramesh's killers. Of Carter's suspected murderers only one was arrested, and being under age he will not be heavily sentenced even if found guilty. Two others have flown home to Pakistan, but British authorities have so far made no particularly strenuous efforts to get them extradited back here to face trial.

Meanwhile, BN's information from informants in Croydon is that, for all the instant press hysteria, it is far from certain that the motive for Aramesh's killing was in fact racial at all.

One thing seems clearly to emerge from this. Whites apparently don't matter as far as the established powers that be in Britain are concerned. They can expect no special treatment or sympathy if attacked by members of immigrant groups. Very likely, in fact, the media and the authorities will turn a blind eye.

War against Whites

British Nationalist is now probably the only newspaper left in Britain that considers it its duty to bring the true facts of what is going on to public attention. Yet there is much evidence that Whites in this country are on the receiving end of violence from immigrants that is racially motivated, despite the censorship and distortion of facts on the issue of inter-racial crime that is the stock-in-trade of the national news media.

Just recently, a white man had his ear hacked off by a black assailant whilst walking down a street in Birmingham. After stopping the 49-year-old victim to ask him for a cigarette as he was walking through the Handsworth district, his assailant, described as a 5ft 6in, 20-25-year-old West Indian, called him a "white animal" before striking off his ear with a walking stick that had a six-inch blade attached to the end of it.

In Westcliff-on-Sea, Essex, a young man who gave his name to BN only as 'Stuart' was attacked by two Asians from his neighbourhood whilst walking home with his girlfriend from doing some shopping. His attackers had previously approached him with threats that they would chop his dog's head off and burn his flat down.

Although Stuart defended himself and his girlfriend manfully he was unable to hold off both his assailants at once. They tripped him over, kicked and punched him and tried to throw him in front of a car. They then rammed his girlfriend's head repeatedly into the side of a parked vehicle until her face was covered in cuts and bruises.

Despite witness statements from bystanders who saw the assault, and also from a victim support group to which Stuart's girlfriend went, Southend Magistrates' Court seemed uninterested in them. Releasing the Asians with a bind-over after allowing proceedings to run for just five minutes, the presiding magistrate left the court laughing.

Schoolchildren who witnessed the original incident were, however, described as having been strongly turned against ethnic minority members by what they saw.

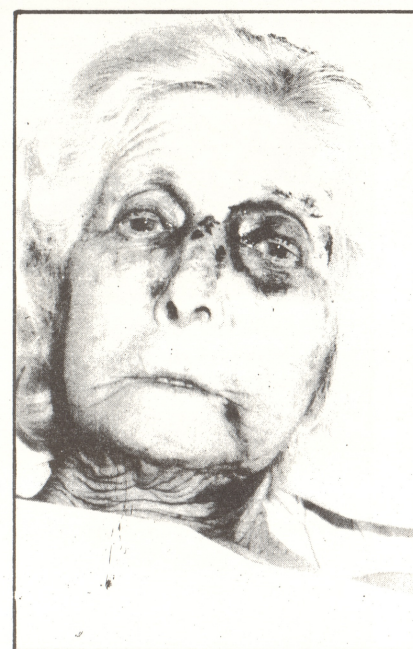

Asians batter grandmother

Meanwhile, in an attack described as "brutal beyond belief" an 89-year-old granny was battered to the ground in Stepney's Clark Street area, in East London, by a gang of four young Asians and mugged for just £5.

Widow and mother of five Mrs. Margaret Warren was found afterwards lying in an alleyway, cut, bruised and with a broken shoulder blade. Police said: "It was a violent attack on a frail, defenceless elderly lady. It is sickening."

In a spirited reaction as she lay in hospital, Mrs. Warren said: "Bring them here. What I want to do to them is unspeakable."

She added: "I've lived here for years. It never used to be like this." She told police: "If they had asked for my bag I would have given it to them. Why did they have to do this to me?"

BEATEN UP FOR £5
Mrs. Margaret Warren in hospital after vicious attack by Asian gang

Local East Enders are still waiting for the local media to admit that there could have been a racial motive in this despicable attack. National media did not see fit to mention it.

PONDERABLE QUOTE

Apartheid as a practical philosophy had one great virtue. It minimised opportunity for mindless racial violence... Racial harmony, not hatred, is the effect of the right to self-determination and ethnic pride. It is mongrelisation and forced integration that create disharmony. Put in another way, forced segregation is considerably less harmful than forced integration, even if it is no ideal. Unfortunately, we don't live in a Platonic ideal world, but in an actual and imperfect one.

NEW REDUCED BOOK OFFER

THE ELEVENTH HOUR (by John Tyndall). We are now offering the hardback edition of this book at a price reduced from £15.00 to £12.00. This is because the paperback edition of the book is nearly sold out but there are a number of copies of the hardback in stock which we wish to clear before printing a new edition, which incidentally will be selling at a price higher than the original £15.00.

The Eleventh Hour has become the modern 'classic' for students of British Nationalism. It was written mostly while the British National Party leader was in prison, having been convicted under Britain's infamous race laws for saying things critical of the ethnic minorities. The book provides a comprehensive exposition of the entire political doctrine of the British National Party. New price £12.00 plus £3.15 p&p.

THREE LABOUR COUNCILLORS owed £6,000 in rent to Southwark Council — and then had the nerve to vote for a decision to write off £15 million owed by rent-dodgers in the London borough with Britain's worst housing debt record.

The three councillors, all women, were slammed by one of their own Labour colleagues, who said: "It's not surprising we lost the election with people like this on our side."

Labour-controlled Southwark spends the community charge-payers' money on 'lesbian studies', hires women-only builders and has an illegal immigrant (Nigerian Anthony Adebo) working in its housing department.

TOWN PLANNERS have threatened to prosecute a landlord for flying six Union Jacks above his pub.

Paul Cunliffe also painted red, white and blue flowers outside the Cheshire Cheese pub in Castleton, near Sheffield.

Mr. Cunliffe promised: "The flags aren't coming down. It shouldn't be a crime to be patriotic."

THE CHARITY COMMISSION has confirmed that Dame Shirley Porter, former leader of Westminster City Council and up till recently Lord Mayor, illegally channelled nearly £100,000 through a charity (the 'Foundation for Business Responsibilities') to fund the re-election of her ruling Conservative Group.

The Commission ordered the trustees of the Foundation to repay the money in full, threatening High Court action if they failed to do so. The money has since been repaid by an anonymous donor.

The Fraud Squad is now investigating the affair.

Dame Shirley is the daughter of Tesco retail millionaire Sir Jack Cohen.

BENGALI MOSLEMS have presented a petition asking their local council to refuse a music and dancing licence for the Brick Lane Hall in Tower Hamlets, East London.

Showman Vincent Hayes has been operating since February on a restricted licence, which does not allow the audience to join in the chorus of innocent songs such as 'Daisy, Daisy'. As a result of the Bengali petition, the council has decided to hold a public enquiry.

Moslem fundamentalists have said that singing and dancing on the stage, as it offends the laws of the Koran. But local Whites are outraged at yet another attack on the British way of life.

As a postscript, it was later found on investigation that at least half of the 400 signatures on the Bengali petition were bogus.

BY-ELECTION IN SPITALFIELDS

Good result in bad area

THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY scored an impressive result in the recent by-election held in the Spitalfields Ward of the London Borough of Tower Hamlets. BNP candidate Ken Walsh gained 82 votes and just under 5 per-cent of the poll, a significant increase on the result achieved when the ward was last contested in 1990.

Spitalfields Ward has the highest concentration of foreigners of any ward in the East End. Only about 20 per-cent of electors are British, and of these many are down-and-outs living in hostels and yuppies dwelling in redeveloped housing on the fringe of the City of London. Indeed, this result, which amounts to nearly 25 per-cent of the total white vote, is one of the most impressive ever gained by the BNP in any election. By standing in this particular ward, the BNP proved its determination to fight for white communities wherever they may be. And the small white community in Spitalfields certainly needs fighting for!

Gangs of Bangladeshi youths routinely roam the area looking for trouble — sometimes attacking Whites, sometimes fighting inter-tribal gang battles with other Asians. One week before polling day, a mob from the Brick Lane area set upon a rival

KEN WALSH
Scored well against the odds

Bangladeshi gang from Camden — and this was swiftly followed by a revenge attack. Meanwhile, the self-styled 'Anti-Nazi League' had been busy handing out illegal leaflets in the ward inciting Bangladeshis to attack white people. Sure enough, these leaflets had their effect, for two Whites were soon viciously beaten as they (rather naively) went down to Brick Lane to have a curry.

The high point of this election campaign was another hugely successful public rally, held in York Hall in Bethnal Green. Massive local news coverage was won by this event, with Ken Walsh featuring prominently on television news bulletins.

Another by-election on 1st October

Polling at another by-election in London's East End was due to take place on Thursday, the 1st October. This issue of BN will be on sale after the election but it is going to the printer beforehand. We are therefore unable to announce the result this month.

No sooner had the Spitalfields campaign ended than the resignation of a Labour councillor for Millward Ward on the Isle of Dogs was announced. This ward is also in the Borough of Tower Hamlets.

This ward, by contrast, is mostly white, and so a totally different style of campaigning has been adopted.

The BNP candidate for Millward Ward is Barry Osborne, and an excellent vote is expected. A full report will appear in next month's BN.

MIDLANDS ROUND-UP by MIDLANDER

THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY has been particularly busy in the Midlands since the general election.

Most of the action has been concentrated in the East Midlands but not to the neglect of the West Midlands, as clearly demonstrated by the two highly successful major activities in Walsall — already reported in BN.

Days of action, consisting of paper-sales and the distribution of leaflets, are a regular feature, and the following Midlands towns and cities have seen large teams of BNP activists flying the Union Jack in shopping precincts and on housing estates: BURTON-ON-TRENT, Kettering, Kirkby-in-Ashfield, Mansfield, Ilkeston, Chesterfield, Stoke-on-Trent, Hucknall, Derby, Northampton, Nottingham, Walsall (already mentioned) and Leicester.

In the Newark area, a campaign by the local BNP unit was launched to oppose the building of an Islamic boarding school in the nearby village of Flintham. The majority of the villagers are strongly opposed to the school, and so of course is the BNP.

The campaign started with the distribution of leaflets in Flintham and surrounding villages, sparking off what the Nottingham Evening Post described as: "Village row on racist leaflet."

Local newspapers published front-page articles after it was discovered that the East Midlands BNP planned to hold an open-air rally in the area. Our opposition to the school was also covered in the national press and broadcasting media.

On Saturday, the 22nd August, a highly successful day of action was held, starting with an open-air meeting in the village of Long Bennington.

At the same time, a bunch of ANA criminals from Leicester, Nottingham, Derby, Lincoln, Sheffield and Coventry assembled in the village of Flintham. Their avowed purpose was to stop the BNP organising and campaigning in the area. This they failed to do, and they were not made welcome by local folk.

Following the Long Bennington rally, the BNP moved off in convoy to fly the national flag and distribute leaflets in Bottesford, Orston, Farndon, Aslockton and many smaller villages in the Flintham area. Local people were delighted to see the party's activists in these places.

Complementing the regional days of action, local branches and groups have also been very busy in their areas promoting the party, and all credit is due to them. Midlands activists who are keen to travel in support of BNP colleagues in other parts of the country attended the rally in Dewsbury which was addressed by American Attorney Kirk D. Lyons.

Activities in the Midlands over the past few weeks have all been success stories. Recent highlights have been the summer camp in Derbyshire, the march in Walsall and the campaign in the Newark area in opposition to the Islamic boarding school.

OBITUARY

BILL OWEN

It is with great sadness that we have to inform our readers that Bill Owen, for many years Regional Organiser of the British National Party for North East England, died last month, aged 68. There follows a tribute to Mr. Owen written by his successor as North Eastern Organiser, Kevin Scott:-

WILLIAM OWEN, the well-known former BNP leader in the North East of England, who has just died, will be remembered by all in the party for his dedication, courage, loyalty and sacrifice to the nationalist cause.

Bill, as he was known to his friends, was born into a mining family in North Shields during the depression-hit twenties.

During the war, he served his time as a fitter in the local shipyards. There he came across the disruptive activities of the Communists, who were attempting to foment strikes amongst the work-force. He attended some Communist meetings but, realising the subversive and anti-British nature of the political left, he bravely opposed them on the shop-floor. Bill was to continue this opposition for the rest of his life.

Later, Bill ran a shop in South Shields for over 20 years. He became involved in local politics in association with the small shop-keepers' group on the local council, confusingly named the 'Progressives'. In the early 1970s he was an Alderman on the old South Shields council.

Increasingly disturbed by growing immigration, Bill was briefly involved with the movement that gathered around Enoch Powell, but realising Powell's shortcomings he joined the National Front, which was the country's major nationalist movement at the time. He stood as NF candidate for South Shields in both of the 1974 general elections, and on the first occasion polled nearly 2,000 votes. The intervention of the Liberals in the second election reduced his vote to just under 1,000. For the 'crime' of standing for the NF he was removed from South Shields council.

During the remainder of the seventies Bill was very active for the National Front in the North East. He later followed John Tyndall out of the NF into the BNP, understanding that only firm leadership could rescue the nationalist movement from oblivion.

Up to last year, Bill was Regional Organiser for the North East, and organised numerous trips around the country in support of party activities outside the region. During this period he proved himself a really stalwart activist for the BNP, keeping the flag flying in North Eastern England when many others were faltering and dropping away.

It was due to his perseverance, in lean times as well as good, that the party revived in the region, and deservedly he was able to see it in better shape than ever before before he died. Today the BNP has become the only credible force for nationalism in the North East, and for that we have to thank Bill Owen more than anyone else.

True to character, Bill was active right up to the very end. At the time of his death, he was about to contest a local council by-election in South Shields.

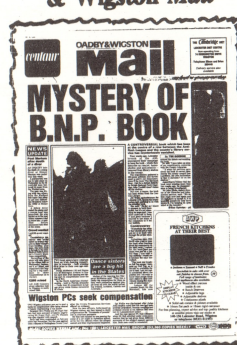

Bill was not only well-known as a nationalist in his native North East; he also had many friends in the movement nationwide. Bill Owen will remain an inspiration to the younger generation of BNP activists now coming through in North East England.

He will be greatly missed by all.

Hysteria over Tyndall book

THE BOOK-BURNERS are at it again! Leicester branch of the 'Anti-Nazi League' recently found that John Tyndall's book The Eleventh Hour was on the shelves of some libraries in the county, and began a campaign to get it removed, threatening demonstrations outside libraries if the the county council refused. But before the council announced its decision on the dreaded book, it disappeared from Leicester's Central Library, having apparently been stolen. No-one on the council would admit, of course, that they had 'arranged' the theft. The affair won quite a bit of local publicity, making the front page of the Oadby & Wigston Mail. Yet another ANA own-goal!

AT ONE WITH ESTABLISHMENT OVER RACE

Another thing these people are at one with the establishment over is race. They can't work hard enough to get immigrants into Britain, especially if these are as alien to the British people, their traditions and their way of life as those coming from the 'Third World'.

They claim to want to fight the 'bosses' and overthrow the state, which they tell us is the 'bosses' front'. But in fact it is none other than the 'bosses' (if by that is meant the big boys of international finance and the multi-national companies) who stand to gain by the importing into Britain of Blacks, Browns, Yellows and shades in between — all as cheap labour. None of this is in any way in the interests of the British working class whom the SWP claims to represent, for British workers stand to see their jobs taken, their wage rates crushed, their neighbourhoods flooded and ruined, and their whole way of life wiped out in the process.

Mass immigration and forced multi-racialism are today practically the central plank in the platforms of both the big global money men and their bought puppets of all parties at Westminster on the one side, and the self-styled 'revolutionary' left on the other.

JUMPING ON BLACK RACIST BANDWAGON

Not that the 'Black Power' postures which are part of the SWP package don't sometimes involve various kinds of embarrassment. Just now, following the film version by black American movie-maker Spike Lee of the life of assassinated 1960s would-be black revolutionary Malcolm X, the SWP is going all out to attract Blacks by jumping on the latter's band-wagon.

The comrades of the Socialist 'Workers' Party so far are not exactly scoring a hit with this one. In fact, far from making friends and influencing people, they are treading on the toes of a great many Blacks, especially Black Moslem militants. Not sharing the nostalgia of the SWP's middle class white and Jewish homosexuals for Marx, Lenin, Trotsky, the Russian Revolution or the Soviet Union, the Black Moslems want to keep the copyright on black folk hero Malcolm for themselves as part of a strategy for all-out race war against Whitey.

REAL WORKING CLASS REACTS

Meanwhile, London's East Enders have shown themselves just as little enthusiastic at the SWP's efforts in this direction. According to one report, not long ago a group of typical SWP agitators, operating under their 'Anti-Nazi League' logo in an East End Saturday market, fled down the road in terror when irate local people waded in to remove their Malcolm X picket-board display. In the words of an old joke, this was probably the first time many of the SWP comrades had ever actually met the working class! This type of behaviour is of a piece with the SWP's habit of running for help to the police (surely the 'class enemy'!) every time they get themselves into trouble on the streets with members of the white British communities they are trying to wreck with their agitation.

These class warriors of the SWP will not of course have to suffer the consequences of the policies they promote and support. If things get too bad in the seedy bedsit districts of our big cities where they like to pose as 'working class' heroes, most of them can always run back to their mummies and daddies in the leafy outer suburbs at the end of their period of juvenile 'rebellion'.

But for the ordinary decent British folk of the inner cities, whose way of life they have helped to ruin, things will not be so easy.

The most important event of the year!

BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY ANNUAL RALLY LONDON

Saturday, October 24th 1992
In the afternoon

SPEAKERS WILL INCLUDE:-

DAVID BRUCE
RICHARD EDMONDS
JOHN TYNDALL

Also present on the platform will be two distinguished guest speakers, one from North America, the other from Europe

DIRECTIONS: Assemble outside Friends House, Euston Road (opp. Euston Sta.)
1.00 p.m.

PLEASE NOTE: This rally is open to all nationalists and patriots, whether or not members of the British National Party. The one proviso is that the organisers reserve the right to refuse entry to any persons whose presence may be thought prejudicial to good order at the meeting.

A social will be held in the evening (details at rally)

Excellent Scottish rally

This year's BNP Scottish rally was moved forward to September 12th. Learning the lessons of the 1991 rally, which was disrupted by police on the pretext of preserving 'public order', our Scottish organisers stage-managed this year's event with admirable thoroughness and efficiency, and the rally took place in perfect order.

The venue was Stonehouse, in Lanarkshire, within the Clydesdale constituency which the BNP contested in the general election in April. Just under 100 turned out to hear speeches by Steve Cartwright, the local candidate, Richard Edmonds, Harry Mullin and party leader John Tyndall, with Scott McLean acting as chairman.

The rally ended in great enthusiasm and an enjoyable social was held in Glasgow in the evening.

SPECIAL APPEAL FUND CLOSED

We are pleased to inform readers that the Special Emergency Appeal made on behalf of the British National Party in our last issue has met with a fine response, and just over £4,500 has been raised. This money was needed to clear debts to our printer resulting from large bills for election literature. In closing the fund, the BNP has asked us to thank all those who have donated.

The party has now launched a new Legal Fund with a target of £2,000. Full details of this can be found in the latest issue of Spearhead magazine.

Ulster BNP joins fight to free jailed UDR soldier

OUTRAGE greeted the decision of the Ulster Court of Appeal over the continued jailing of Ulster Defence Regiment soldier Neil Latimer. Neil and three of his colleagues had been imprisoned for allegedly murdering a known republican, Adrian Carroll, in the Abbey Street district of Armagh back in 1983, using a UDR patrol as cover for their action.

The men's convictions were secured on what appeared to be sketchy evidence of identification by two female witnesses, who were near the scene but did not themselves see Carroll's death, coupled with crucial confessions extracted from the four UDR officers whilst they were under interrogation in Castlereagh holding centre.

The Appeal Court found that police notes of the interrogation had been changed, and that these doctored records had then been falsely authenticated by senior RUC officers. Three of the four, Winston Allen, Noel Bell and James Hegan, were released on the grounds that their 1985 conviction was unsafe.

But to the shocked surprise of Ulster's loyal British community Neil Latimer's conviction and sentence were allowed to stand.

This was despite revelations by Noel Bell that he himself had been treated "worse than an animal" by RUC officers whilst under interrogation. He was subjected to both physical and mental maltreatment in custody in order to squeeze his confession from him. It is thought that the same methods were used on his three colleagues, including Neil Latimer, and the guilty officers face prosecution.

The affair has shattered the trust of many British Ulster folk in their own police force, which ought to be there for the primary purpose of protecting the loyal people of the province from their own and the rest of the United Kingdom's republican enemies.

For loyalists, the case of the Armagh Four, with its final kick in the guts in the way of the failure of the Appeal Court to release Neil Latimer, is just one more act of appeasement, betrayal and sell-out to the IRA, Sinn Féin and the Irish Government in Dublin, originating with the politicians of Westminster.

Only political pressure of this kind can explain the treatment originally meted out to the four in custody. It would seem that certain elements high up in the RUC, eager to win favour with their political masters in the Northern Ireland Office, are prepared to lower the standards of integrity of what has been (and for the most part still is) a fine force of men and women with a proud record of doing their duty for their country. For it is difficult to see how else the conduct of the officers handling the Armagh Four case could have been tolerated.

Latimer's treatment is in stark contrast to the way that the Government and the courts bent over backwards for the Guildford Four and the Birmingham Six — all of them declared republican sympathisers. On the latter ground alone, they might well have qualified for indefinite internment as fifth columnists at a time when Britain is at war, as she still is in Northern Ireland, whether or not they were technically guilty of the specific acts with which they were charged.

But as things stand, these people are now at liberty whilst Neil Latimer, whose loyalty to Britain no-one can question, rots in jail.

In August, Ulster BNP turned out for the 'Free Neil Latimer' rally in Lisburn as part of a major day of action in the province.

Neil needs support and encouragement, and our friends in Northern Ireland urge everyone to write to him. His address is as follows:-

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the Common Market
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum possible self-sufficiency in food production.
- Rejection of both the poll tax and its substitute, the new 'property tax', and a return to the old rates system, though with fairer rebates allowing for differences in income and in the numbers occupying properties.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO, closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain, the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish Agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- Repeal of the laws permitting homosexuality and abortion (except where the latter is the result of rape or necessary on medical grounds), the wiping out of AIDS and a return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
